FREE TEXT BOOKS ARE BENEFICIAL.

That Was Decision of Judges
at the High School

IN DEBATE OF STUDENTS

As to Whether System in Effect in Pennsylvania Is More Detrimental Than Beneficial To All Interests Concerned.

"Resolved, That the free text book system exists in Pennsylvania is more detrimental than beneficial to all it concerns," was the subject of one of the most interesting questions ever debated on by the Connellsonian and Philo Literary societies of the Connellsonian High School. The Connellsonian Society met in the High School building and the Philo Society in the Carnegie Free Library. The question was one of unusual interest to the students and was discussed at length by the debaters. At the conclusion of their addresses, short talks on the subject were given by other members of the society. The Connellsonian debaters were affirmative, Ada Mae Hamon and Arthur Wolf; negative, Emma Ford and Paul Wolf. The Philo debaters were affirmative, Charles McComick and Gwendolin Springer; negative, Florence Patterson and Sue Leske. The judges representing both of the societies gave their decision in favor of the negative side of the question.

Resolutions by Fred Ruth, Norman Marshall, Horace Rumminger, stories by Irvin Sutherland, Florence Stillwagon, essays by Herman Lovine, Edna Davis, Margaret Donnelly and Anna Ray Thompson, the paper edited by Ada Zimmerman and Ruth Gallantine, composed the literary part of the program. Music was rendered by Prof. Fred Kuehl, Edgar Horner and Eleanor Horner.

The following was the Fritchsonian program: recitations, Mary Wertheim, Rev. Edmund Dunn, Margaret Cox and Nels Breckin; stories, Howard Miller, Eugene Hall, Ethel Sherman and Esther Tazzy; essays, Percy Sheetz, Ruth Hunter and Carl Flory; paper, Catherine O'Connor; piano duet, Edmunds, piano solo, Mrs. Charney; piano duet, Ruth Cunningham and Sam Maust; piano solo, Edith Morton. Both societies nominated officers. The election will take place at the next regular meeting of the societies.

Saloon Man is Murdered

United Press Telegram.
CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—With a sleeping man sitting within 10 feet, John Mulvaney, aged 55, grocerkeeper, was found dead today beside his bar with a bullet hole through his heart. Fred Auhm, the sleeping man, living his home as Schenck's, denied all connection with the crime and the police believed he was confronted with another death mystery.

The body was discovered by a customer. Auhm was awakened and the police called at once. They placed Auhm under arrest. The prisoner asserts that he entered the saloon early this morning, finding the door unlocked and wishing a warm place to sleep. The police believe Mulvaney was attacked by a belligerent man immediately after the saloon's closing hour last night and that resisting he was killed. Auhm will be held pending an investigation.

Col. Huff Loses by Fire Today

SPECIAL TO THE COURIER.
GREENSBURG, Feb. 1.—A barn, garage and bowling alley at Cabin Hill, the home of Col. Lloyd G. Huff and summer residence of Congressman and Mrs. George F. Huff, were burned in a fire discovered by a farm hand about 6 o'clock this morning. Volunteers from Greenfield were unable to save either of the three buildings. The loss is about $5,000, partly insured.

Eight vehicles and three horses were saved from the barn and the moving furniture from the bowling alley. There were no automobiles in the garage. The suggestion that Incredulark might have started the fire is scouted by Col. Huff, who was at home at the time. Detective Wining may have been responsible, Col. Huff asserts.

Police Officer Town.
Parole Officer Charles O'Neill was in Connellsville this morning investigating the case of John McClinton, the 15 year old West Side girl, who was arrested last week and lodged in the county jail of her mother. She is charged with incorrigibility.

FRED DOBILHAUER TAKES OVER HAAS HOTEL LEASE.

Well Known Poplar Grove German Pays $14,000 for Seven Year Lease on Water Street Hotel.

Fred Dobilhauer of Poplar Grove has leased the Haas Hotel on Water street and will take charge of the establishment as soon as the lease is transferred. The petition for the transfer was being circulated in the streets today and will be presented to court as soon as possible.

The purchaser is said to have paid $11,000 for a seven year lease on the property. The hotel is considered a splendid proposition and under the management of the late Andrew Haas it was most profitable.

The new proprietor is a well known

BRIDE OF A WEEK IS ARRESTED HERE.

Constable William Roland last evening arrested Joe Crescheck and Joe Zocca shortly after they left the Trotter mine where they had been working. Both took part in the free-for-all fight on Thursday evening in which two miners were injured.

A constable was arrested later in the evening in the same case. All furnished well before Squier Robert McLaughlin of Dushar township for a hearing on Monday evening at 6 o'clock.

John Vilano, who received the most serious injuries of any of the five men engaged in the scrap, is able to be around and it is not thought that there will be any serious results from the wounds.

He came to town this morning and was examined by Dr. W.

City of Main Street, West Side. There are two scratches caused by the skillful withdrawal of a pick in the hands of one of his assailants. It was found that the skull had not been fractured.

Two other arrests in the case were made by Roland and County Detective Frank McLaughlin following the trouble. They also furnished bail.

Charges of assault and battery with intent to kill and murder were preferred by McLaughlin.

Rev. Allison
Accepts Call

Rev. J. P. Allison of Cleveland yesterday afternoon notified the committee of the Christian church of his acceptance of the call to succeed Rev. C. M. Watson as pastor of the church here. Mr. Allison will come within the next 60 days and states he will make every effort to fill the vacant pulpit by March 1.

Two weeks ago Rev. Allison spoke at both the morning and evening services in the church. He made a splendid impression upon the congregation and the following Sunday a unanimous call was extended him. No other name was suggested. The acceptance recently was in response to this call.

Seeks His Sister,
Mrs. Walter Boyd

Does Mrs. Walter Boyd live in Connellsville? If she does it might surprise to know that her brother, Arthur Jackson has come all the way from Los Angeles, California, to see her and now can't even get trace of her whereabouts.

Jackson kept the morning examining directories and other records in the hopes of getting a clue, but to no avail. He received two letters from her some time ago, he says, postmarked Connellsville. This is all he has to work on.

He says she wrote that work was good in this place and she would remain here. Jackson is very anxious to get trace of her again.

First Batch of Tramps Go To Work On Fayette County Stone Pile.

The first lot of tramps to be put to work on the stone pile in Fayette county will likely take up their hammers today in the quarry that is being opened near the county home below Uniontown. Within the last couple of days, Constable Jacob Chugia of North Uniontown managed to round up nine candidates for the hammer, namely, Mike Garrett, Robert Dillid, Andy Bachelder, George Cowart, John Evans, Harry Taylor, Tom Blazor, Joe Kuchack and John Souplid.

When asked if he expected the country in which Oliver Chiars landed his unfortunate and succeeded in getting three more or returning the next day.

All were taken before Justice John Boyle of Uniontown and charged with vagrancy. Sentences of 10 days each were imposed. Three others were cap-

Jurisdiction Will Be Questioned

United Press Telegram.
JERSEY CITY, Feb. 1.—When the eight officials of the Jersey Central railroad, the DuPont Powder Company and Captain James Harrison, owner of the Little Red Barn, were arraigned before Justice Quinn today, the German of the vicinity and as an active member of the Liederkranz has been in close touch with its affairs.

Fred Dobilhauer has a wide range of friends and acquaintances not only among those of his own nativity but others as well.

Over to the Dance.

SHE MISSED THE LAST CAR

Which Was to Carry Her to Her Everson Home and Police Look on Her as a Suspicious Character—Burges was Discharged.

Annie Bonosky, bride of a week, craves social pleasure and it got her into trouble early this morning. Officers James Francis and P. M. Ball arrested her as she emerged with a man from the rear door of a Pittsburgh street hotel and escorted her to the lockup on the charge of being a suspicious character. Annie was arrested before Burgess J. L. Evans this morning and discharged with a warning to seek pleasure nearer her Everson home than Connellsville.

Annie told Burgess Evans her husband was called to Greensburg to act as an interpreter last night so she came over to the rear entrance of the hotel to miss the last car for Everson and started a search for lodgings. After being turned down at two hotels, she was leaving the third when told the police were looking for a girl and might get her.

"Come along with me, I told a friend of mine there, it won't look so bad if you are with me when I go out," Annie told the Burgess.

The young man went along and the pair left the rear entrance just in time to run into the waiting officers. The young man was not arrested but the girl went to the police station charged with being a suspicious character.

"Honest, Mr. Burgess," I haven't been in town for three weeks up to last night."

Burgess Evans told her to go home and stay there.

MURDERER SENTENCED

To Penitentiary on Conviction of Second Degree Murder.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 4.—(Special)—Antelo Samanlari, who was convicted of second degree murder earlier in the week for the killing of James Spurlock at Imperial, today was sentenced to the penitentiary by Judge John A. Evans. The Judge imposed a sentence of not less than five nor more than 20 years.

The Connellsville election was held at 3 o'clock and resulted as follows:

President, F. W. Wright; Vice President, W. W. Wright; and Secretary and Treasurer, S. W. Metzler.

Correspondent Up for Libel

United Press Telegram.
CUMBERLAND, Md., Feb. 1.—John W. McConaughy, Cumberland correspondent of the New York Evening Journal, was arrested at noon today by Deputy Sheriff Walter Clay, on two charges of criminal libel for the alleged publication yesterday in the Journal of a sensational story in connection with the Elsasser-Twigg murder mystery. McConaughy was taken to jail pending a preliminary hearing.

Engines Hit Auto.

At Morewood yesterday John D. Hitchman's automobile was struck by a locomotive and Chauffeur Roy Bowens was slightly injured. Three children of Mr. Hitchman escaped injury.

He says she wrote that work was good in this place and she would remain here. Jackson is very anxious to get trace of her again.

Mrs. Shober Broke Her Hip

Mrs. Shober, an aged woman of Springfield township, fell yesterday and sustained a fractured hip. Dr. A. J. Cohorn of town was summoned to the Shober home near Springerton and found the aged woman in a serious condition. Mrs. Shober is 76 years old. John Shober, who recently moved to Florida, is a son of Mrs. Shober's who has been making her home on the farm with her grandson.

MONROE DOCTRINE

And Foreign Policy of United States
Up for Debate.

"Resolved, That the foreign policy of the United States has impaired the efficiency of the Monroe Doctrine, will be debated at the annual meeting of the Leisenring and Connellsonian Literary societies of the Dunbar township High School to be held in the near future."

The Leisenring Society will discuss the affirmative side of the question and the Fritchsonian the negative.

BROWNSVILLE LUNCH SAVED THE PILGRIMS.

Special Train Was Stalled on Percy Hill for 50 Minutes but Nobody Suffered.

Although the special train of seven cars on the P. R. R. was stalled by those who made the pilgrimage to the Brownsville tabernacle last evening, there was no panic or danger. The passengers were represented by a big array of lawyers.

It was made plain that the jurisdiction of the Hudson county authorities was to be questioned from the outset. Prosecutor Garven told the court that he was prepared to prove that the explosion which caused the disaster had been in the city for six days without the knowledge of the authorities that permit was not applied for. In this case, he said, was due to the fact that the railroad and powder company officials knew that not only would such a permit be refused but that if the officials of the city knew of such a quantity of explosives had been brought inside the limits, steps would have been taken to protect the community.

Additional divers were put to work today searching for bodies at the scene of the explosion.

THE CAUSE OF HIS DEATH

Was Bright's Disease From Which He Had Suffered for Several Months.
For a Number of Years He Was Prominent Among Brewery Workers.

Following an illness of Bright's disease, Otto Tippman, aged 35 years, three months and 29 days, died this morning at 4:20 o'clock at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tippman, Sr., on South Madison street. Deceased had been in poor health for some time past and about three weeks ago his condition grew worse. For two weeks he had confined to his bed.

Deceased was born in Greensburg and at the age of 11 years he came to Connellsville with his parents to reside. Since that time he has resided here. He never married. Deceased was a member of the Immaculate Conception Church and was widely known in town and popular among his numerous friends. He was a brewery worker for many years of his life, having been a brewer before he got employment with the Connellsville Cement Cleaning Company and while in this position with the company until the time he commenced to fail in health.

In addition to his parents he is survived by the following brothers and sisters: John of Monesson; Harry Eugene and Anna at home; Mrs. William Flinn, Mrs. F. O. Moore and Joseph, Jr., all of Connellsville. Funeral from his home Monday morning at 8:30 o'clock. Requiem High Mass will be celebrated at 9 o'clock at the Immaculate Conception Church. Interment in St. Joseph's Cemetery.

On Friday, through her agent, George W. Williams, the West Side real estate man, Mrs. Marie Bowman sold her home on Eighth street, Green-well Street, to John Giffon of Main street, West Side. The new owner expects to move into his new home April 1.

Mrs. Bowman built the house, a frame one, about two years ago. Thirty-eight hundred dollars was the consideration.

Dorothy Arnold is Not Located

United Press Telegram.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The report that Dorothy Arnold, the missing heiress, has finally located in Philadelphia was denied by members of the family today. John W. Arnold, brother of the girl, returned to his home here and reported that his ward of the Quaker City had been in the care of John Sidebottom and was a daughter of the late James and Catherine Jones DeVoll. She never married and of late years had resided at the home of John Sidebottom.

The body will be shipped to Indian Creek tomorrow morning by funeral Director E. E. Sims on B. & O. train No. 6. On arrival of the train services will be held at 10 o'clock at the Indian Creek Baptist church. Interment at Mill Run.

Annual Institute
at Leisenring

Supervising Principal R. K. Smith, of the Dunbar township schools, is arranging for the annual township teachers' institute to be held Saturday, February 11, at the High School building in Leisenring No. 1. There will be a morning and afternoon session and much will be served in the High School students. A very interesting program is being arranged and the institute promises to be a very instructive one.

Friday evening, February 10, Dr. Beck, of the Clarion State Normal will deliver a lecture to the teachers, parents and friends of the school.

Patrons' Day
in Dunbar Schools

Friday, February 17, will be observed as "Patrons' Day" in the Dunbar township grade schools. Special work will be on exhibition in all the rooms and all friends and patrons of the school are invited to visit the schools and inspect the work of the students.

Patrons' Day will be observed in the High School on a later date.

The Fall of Juarez Expected After Short Formal Resistance.

United Press Telegram.
EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 4.—It is now considered certain that Juarez will put up only a perfunctory defense when attacked today by the insurgents. The city was reported quiet today. All of the business houses, except the saloons, are closed. Flags of half-mast in nations all over business establishments as a sign that the property is owned by foreigners, who will hold the insurgents responsible for all damage.

While it was agreed that General Orozco would take the city some time today, there is no means of telling just when the assault will begin. Orozco was less than 10 miles away at daylight and was thus said to be only waiting the arrival of the remainder of his force to start his forward movement.

The local forces are almost without ammunition. Hope that reinforcements would arrive from the south when abandoned by the federal garrison when the officer in charge of the Diaz troops at Ciudad Guzman had decided that to leave the place to try to retain the city would be suicidal, because of the number of insurgents between the two places.

It was reported later in the morning that Orozco had been joined by the insurgent command of General De la Blanca. The insurgents are well armed with modern repeating rifles and plenty of ammunition. They are also reported to have four rapid-fire guns or the old fashioned pattern and four old howitzers. The loyal troops in Juarez have taken up a position on the southern side of the city but there is little doubt that after a short resistance for form's sake they will surren-

The Funeral of John Dull

Funeral services over the remains of the late John Alexander Dull were held yesterday in the home of his widow, Mrs. Ella Buzzard, No. 116 Caton street. Rev. E. B. Burges, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church of which the deceased was a member, officiated. The remains will be shipped this afternoon to McKeesport by Funeral Director J. E. Sims and will be removed to the home of Mrs. T. J. Wehnerberger, No. 613 Grant avenue, McKeesport, from which place services will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services will be in charge of the Rev. Sam Black Post No. 59, G. A. R., of McKeesport.

Dull was a son of the late Jacob and Margaret Dull and was born and reared in Somerset county. He was aged 19 years, 10 months and 16 days. In May 1892, he was married to Miss Mary Johnson of Stoystown, and in 1895 Mr. Dull went to Johnstown to reside. In 1897 they moved to McKeesport, at which place they resided up to the four years ago, when they came to Connellsville to reside. Mr. Dull was a son of a family of 11 children and was the father of 11 children. He was a Civil War veteran and took part in many of the prominent battles. He was in Libby Prison for three months. In 1862 he enlisted in Greensburg with Company H, 67th Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was honorably discharged at the close of the war. He was a member of Col. Sam Black Post No. 59, G. A. R., of McKeesport. He was a tailor by trade.

Mr. Dull had been in good health up until the past week and had not been expected to die because of the fact that he was able to live about on Thursday. Had he lived until the 29th of last month he would have celebrated the 23rd anniversary of his marriage. In addition to his widow, who is in her 82nd year, and following children, Mrs. T. J. Wehnerberger and Mrs. Ella Buzzard of Connellsville, he is survived by three brothers, Daniel J. and Simon B. Dull of Monona, Ia., and Abraham Dull of Willamette Falls, Oregon.

The Prevention of Tuberculosis

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis is making its presence known throughout the country, and has a local association within the last couple of days.

Yesterday, in Connellsville, Bill Post, company put up a number of glass-faced posters from the association in conspicuous places about the city, denouncing the squalor and labor. The posters are neatly gotten up and attract attention at once; with a large headline warning against crowding the sleeping and working rooms.

An illustration impresses the point, showing a half dozen people sleeping in a poorly ventilated room.

The posters were printed by a well-known Philadelphia concern, who do not know material cost. They are being distributed everywhere, and are bound to aid greatly in the crusade against the "white plague," consumption.

The association is directing its efforts from their headquarters at No. 193 East 22nd street, New York.

WASHING WITHOUT WATER

Is Like Trying to Get Rid of Dandruff Without Herpicide.

Did you ever see any one trying to wash themselves without soap or water?

If you did what would you do him?

It is every bit as foolish to try to get rid of dandruff without the present Buildex as it is to wash the germs which cause it off. Buildex is Herpicide. Glycerine and similar substances which form the principal ingredients of most so called hair dressers.

Newbold Herpicide is exceeeedingly efficacious. It attacks and kills the parasitic germ which feeds on the hair roots.

It is the original and only genuine scalp herpicide manufactured.

BURNING OF WIDOWS.

The Horrible Rite India Maintained For Over Twenty Centuries.

The abolition of the horrid rite of widow burning in India was decreed by the British authorities in 1829.

The dreadful practice was found there by the British under Alexander the Great, 300 years before

Christ, and for more than twenty-long, weary centuries did it repeat almost incomparable torture and ignorance upon the women of India. The sacrifice, while not actually forced on the wife, was so strongly insisted on by public opinion that it amounted to a law, and its victims were forced to burn within the walls of their houses.

BEGGARS BEAT SWEET CHARITY.

Scottdale Is Suffering From a Pest of Professional Workers.

BIDESTEP ANY EMPLOYMENT

People Are Afraid of Turning Away Really Deserving, But the Other Sort Have About Gone the Limit. Other Notes.

Special to The Courier,
SCOTTDALE, Feb. 4.—Professional mendicants are pestering the folks out of people here. Morning, noon and night it is the beggars' rap at the door. He, she and they think Scottdale is the one truly good thing. And, working a good thing is better than hanging on to the precarious trim of a job. Hale and hearty folks find an opportunity to help. They have been offered in exchange for coin of the realm, but ingenuous executives have been the only reply. One stout, husky woman who was asked why her husband did not work, gave an answer that put Oldfaced Ossler, when she replied, with a toss, of her head, "Well, you can't expect much of a man that's $8." The man of the house in this case is 71 years old and is working every day and looks as if he is going for many more. He is not a big fellow, however, and asked by a woman who has worked hard all the days of her life, if she couldn't sweep a room for her, said with her nose in the air: "No, lady, my doctor says I must not work. I have a weak heart." Some of the beggars gather up whole baskets of stuff and carry the plunder home on the street cars. One party that did this one afternoon was seen systematically working another part of town in the afternoon.

The people here are very generous and kind, but are really destroying people, but forthrightness has ceased to be such a virtue and the police are being appealed to for aid. Joe M. Steiner, the mineowner, had a fellow come in the store the other day and ask for a dime to get home to Connellsville. Joe forked out the dime and failed to notice that the fellow was picked in something else than brains. A car came along but the fellow said he wasn't ready to get in. Instead he went to a corner & disappeared. The man, Marie & Bohemia's, Steiner followed the fellow and turned him over to Chief McFadden. A short time later the lookout and then the latter was given time enough to leave town.

Entertained Her Class.

Miss Amy Jane Porter entertained the 25 members of her Sunnabillie class of the Jacobs Creek Methodist Episcopal Sunday School at her home in the country west of Scottdale today. The class is a very active one and the Sunday school teacher and principal that was had, with a after luncheon served.

Alverton Charge.

The services at the three churches on the Alverton church of the Methodist Episcopal Church tomorrow will be as follows: Alverton, Sunday school at 10 and preaching at 11 A.M., and Epworth League at 6:30 P.M.; Jacobs Creek, Sunday school at 1:15, preaching at 3 and Epworth League at 6:30 P.M., and at Wesley Chapel Sunday school at 10:30 A.M. and Epworth League at 7:30 P.M.

Mrs. Lister's Spoke.

At the temperance meeting in Breckinridge yesterday, Mrs. L. H. Detwiller of Scottdale spoke on the subject of "The Educational Factor in Solving the Saloon Problem?" She scolded the ministers severely for their timidity in the pulpit and the fact that often members of their congregations interested in the liquor traffic were permitted to dominate the expression of the ministers' views. Rev. H. W. Miller of Scottdale, Pres. of the organization, however, certainly does not come under the kind described.

Basketball Tonight.

Slamshur is looking for the basketball game to be played at Ellsworth auditorium at 8 o'clock this evening, when the Scottdale High School team meets the Indian club team. The latter say that they have no experience in the basketball business and that they may be losers by a large score. But perhaps this is only true to destruction the other fellows.

Were Lightly Clad.

The Running Club of the Y. M. C. A. were out last evening, prancing along in the light weight, abbreviated costume worn by runners, and which looks very silly. In the cold winds that were moaning through town about that time, the boys did not mind the winds, however, and trotted along comfortably, apparently, very leisurely in fact in the crowded streets, and looking around as if the weather was about the consistency of dog days. Perhaps when they got out in the suburbs they put on enough steam to warm them up.

Education Program.

The dedication of St. Paul's Lutheran Church on Mulberry street will take place tomorrow with the dedicatory sermon at 11:15 by Rev. A. L. Yount, D. D., of Greenbush, followed by an address by Rev. J. C. Kuzman, D. D., of Philadelphia. There will be a platform meeting at 3 o'clock in the afternoon to which all the ministers and people of town are invited. In the evening at 7:30 Rev. G. J. Gonigawar of Pittsburgh will preach.

Tempt Fate Living On Top of Volcano

Frank A. Perret, an American, Engaged in Vesuvian Exploration, Has Strangest Home in the World—Built Over a Fissure in Mountain Side, He Can Hear Unceasing Struggle of the Terrestrial Elements Down in the Bowels of the Earth While Lying in Bed—Thrives on Nerve Racking, Sleep Dispelling Experiences.

Frank Perret, American Scientist, Listening to Disturbance Through Vesuvius Fissure by Means of Dictograph.

Vesuvius in an Angry Mood.

Following the trail of the tiger and the rhino through the trackless jungle may have its compensating advantages, nevertheless it is like living for the sake of the vain, ostentatious and is worth while, you must live on the crest of a volcano.

The sensation is immense. It may not enchant you to fancy yourself owing shot and shell to a florid, small, several thousand feet in the air and deposited piecemeal on some deserted hillside four or five miles away or waking up some bright morning on the other side of the Styx, with the consoling information that while you kidnapped that merciful lamb, he had not been so unmerciful as to kill it. But it's the sort of experience that is out to keep you on edge every minute and turn your thoughts wistfully back to those tranquil days of babyhood, before the spirit of adventure lured you into danger's zone. To those who have eaten of the apple knowledge and played every string on life's harp, save this one, it's a bully experience. But unless you have nerves of steel, and an angel's patience, you had better not try it. No occupation in the world is so nerve-tightening, so unpredictable, so uncertain. When it does happen, the world usually stands nearest at the enormity of the catastrophe visited upon some helpless community.

But with all the shortcomings there is something impressive about living in the crater of a volcano, the thrill of making your home on a real volcano, which is hard to resist.

From whatever angle you gaze on the encircling horizon, the vista is one of death and desolation. It is a spectacle that impresses and depresses, and until you have the real sporting strain in you, it may make you wish you were back on dear old Broadway, with its plethora of caviar and lobster and the ambrosial Wurzburger that cheeps.

At all places in the world, there is late in the afternoon, the maddening, maddening, it is the place for the sage man, the human stoic, who is not over particular whether Gabriel calls him unto his own from amidst the gayeties of civilization or the flame-seared ribs of old Jerusalem.

To-night it might be called the sport of kings, if it did not have a serious side to it. And there's the bunch. Out of curiously kings and princes, sickened by the obsequiousness of their courts, occasionally would solace and stimulation in its noisy environment, as the pernicious racketed brutes looks to the sanatorium to brace and sustain all living things hereabouts.

The treatment being heroic, little of the tone surfaces and such excursions are invariably of short duration. They are embarked upon generally when there is relatively little time desired, but, enabling a man to gather such an experience as the momentary activity of the slumbering monster affords without unnecessary risk.

Whatever feeling of instability it may conjure in the mind of one, the prospect of exposure to the elements is no terror to Frank Perret, an American of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has spent the last five years on Mount Vesuvius, studying its phenomena. American tourists who went out to see the volcano this summer found him busy exploring the opening of the great crater which destroyed Pompeii, Herculaneum and the like.

In this inferno, which has been home, playground, laboratory and everything to him through the alternating paroxysms of quiet and eruption, which apply the acid test to one's courage and shake the stoutest heart, his lot with the trials and tribulations has been accordingly hard.

What would be to the great majority of men the equivalent to service in a mad house is to him a fascinating study. In their suggestion of mighty power the seemed and scarred ridge of the volcano presenting one of the most forbidding looking perspectives in the world, is the most dramatical sight, the most sublime, the most awfully menacing, uplifting and majestic picture nature affords in its profusion and variety of landscape, the earth over.

Like a babe cooed to sleep by its mother's lullaby, this roughly constituted Yankee has made repeated sacrifices to the rock and the red hot lava, the boiling forth of molten lava and the terrific detonations through which nature expresses its internal agony. No thought of peril perturbs him.

No peasant in the pastoral valley beyond lives in more placid security than does our hero, more free from fear, less personal fear of danger than he.

For a number of years Perret has engaged in making a scientific examination of the volcano in collaboration with the officials of the royal observatory. With the hope that his researches and observations may be of value to the world, he has written a series of articles on the volcano, in his consideration of certain phases of the volcano, which from time immemorial have been enveloped in more or less doubt. All of his field experiments are made with the aid of a portable seismograph, a barometer and a dictograph. With the seismograph he is able to register not only any unusual disturbance of Vesuvius, but any incalculable violent shock originating anywhere on the entire continent of Europe. The seismometer measures the intensity and direction of the disturbance and means of determining which magnified sound waves, he is able to detect the most minute murmur below the surface of the earth. In making his observations, Perret drops a diaphragm of this instrument connected with two wires, into a fissure at the foot of Mount Vesuvius. Over the fissure he places a cone covering, much like a phonograph horn, through which the hot vapors escape as steam from a peanut roaster. Through this the wires are passed to the top of the volcano, extending out on the outside with a receiver. By placing this to his ear the explorer is able to hear the faintest rumble in the bowels of the earth, and determine the condition of the troublous area below. These observations are taken at intervals of 10 days, and the results are sent in to the observatory. An accurate record of them is kept, the data thus collected being exceedingly valuable from a scientific standpoint, showing as they do every premonitory symptom of a coming disaster.

As the experiments begin before sunrise and are extended into the night, whenever in the judgment of the Yankee explorer there is warrant for suspending that they will yield important results.

They are never so interesting or found in development, with the volcano, as when the earth seems about to burst apart and cosmic disintegration appears at the surface.

It is a simple but attractive little abode, suggesting in its sparsely furnished a keen realization of the ownership of insecurity. A few chairs, a table and bed, a few books and a few pieces of hardware to give cheer to an otherwise weird environment.

At first the awful solitude of the hermitage pallied on him, but he has now gotten used to his isolation from the world's noise and bustle, and finds it a tonic.

It is to observe him, his self-imposed task becomes to him that only a disturbance on Mount Etna, or the blowing up of old Stromboli can lure him away from it. In this mountain retreat nothing escapes his observation.

The house of the scientist commands a most wonderful view of the country, and in addition to one direction, the sea, Perret's front porch looks out on the horizon.

It is in its repulsive silence, license out of doors, that Perret finds his chief interest, and he has become so absorbed in his self-imposed task become to him that only a disturbance on Mount Etna, or the blowing up of old Stromboli can lure him away from it. In this mountain retreat nothing escapes his observation.

Applicants for Liquor License Filed So Far in Somerset County.

SOMERSET, Pa., Feb. 4.—Saturday, February 4, is the last day for the filing of liquor license applications, and there will be nearly 100 applications on file with F. A. Harrah, clerk of the Criminal Court. Last year there were 81 petitions filed of which about six were refused.

Among the new applications are issued W. Gauthier of Conemaugh township; Frank Larkins of Casselman; J. H. O'Connell of Homestead; G. G. Deofizer of Meyersdale; Elmer E. Cleveland of Zimmlerville; Norman Sebring of Windber. John O. Rauch of Jenner is the only applicant for wholesale license, who has filed his petition.

The following distillers and brewers have filed petitions: Christian Edward, Brothersville; T. J. Crotty, Edinburg; George S. Smith, Tarenton Distillery, Canonsburg; New Baltimore; Edwin B. Kline, Lower Turkeyfoot township; G. G. Armstrong, Rock Lough, Mary Buckman, S. S. Rickard, J. H. Leighty.

Salisbury borough Henry Loechel; William Deitz; Somerford, Clifford H. Springer; Somerset borough, H. G. Spitzmiller, Andy Schlossmacher, Elizabeth A. Grove, D. W. Taylor, Somerford township; Elmer E. Cleveland, John F. Werner, Ed. Laufer, Wellsville; Grant A. Trower.

Windber, Joseph T. McCormick, John P. King, J. E. Ulason, Andrew Tinko, Anna M. Bloom, John Metz, W. J. and H. F. Murphy, Frank Tuhr, Norman Sebring.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING

For the Old People?

It may be your father, your mother, your grandfather or your grand mother who is very dear to you, but it is sad to them lose their interest in life because their strength is fast ebbing away and they seem doomed to the weak, feeble and decrepit condition of the aged.

Now is the time for you to come to the aid of the aged.

Call at our store and get a bottle of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, without oil, and see what a change it will make in your dear ones.

A case is recorded in Litchfield, Ill., of a man 72 years of age who seemed to be getting old and feeble, suffered from indigestion and a nervous trouble. His druggist asked him to try Vinol at his risk. He did and says he is better and feels younger than he has for fifteen years.

We wish every feeble aged person would try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be refunded if it does not give perfect satisfaction. Graham & Company, Druggists, Connellsville, Pa.

constipation permanently by proper personal co-operation with the benevolent effects of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, when required. The forming of regular habits is most important and while endeavoring to form them the assistance of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is most valuable, as it is the only laxative which acts without disturbing the natural functions and without debilitating and it is the one laxative which leaves the internal organs in a naturally healthy condition, thereby really aiding one in that way. To get its beneficial effects, buy the genuine manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is never classed by the well-informed with medicines which make extravagant and unfounded claims to cure habitual constipation without personal co-operation.

Gavanagh, * Forest * Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

CHAPTER XI.

LEVE PLAYS A MAN'S PART—ALSO LEFT. Lee's mob besieged Cavanagh. His saloon had not found its leader. It heeded and blustered, but did not static and eventually edged out of the door and disappeared. But the silence which followed its retreat was more alarming to the ranger than its presence. Some silent mischief was in these minds. He feared that they were about to cut the electric light wires and so plunge him into darkness, and to prepare for that emergency he called upon the bartender (Halley) being vanquished for a lamp or a lantern.

The fellow sullenly set about this task and Ross, turning to Gregg, said, "If you've any influence with this mob you'd better use it to keep them out of mischief, for I'm on this job to the bitter end, and somebody's going to be hurt."

Gregg, who seemed quite detached from the action and rather delighted with it, replied: "I have no influence. They don't care a hoot about me. That's how it is for you, isn't it?"

Edwards remained silent, with his hat drawn low over his eyes, evidently that he was anxious to avoid being seen and quite willing to keep out of the conflict; but, with no hand-cuffs and the back door of the saloon unguarded, Ross was aware that his guard must be incessant and alertly vigilant.

"Such a thing could not happen under the English flag," he said to himself, and at the moment his adopted country sounded most mercifully safe. Only those in the field and the chief moved him for the long vigil. "The chief will understand if it comes up to him," he said.

Lee Wetherford came bursting in, looking as though she had just risen from her bed. She was clothed in a long red robe, her grizzled hair was loose, her feet were bare, and she carried a huge old fashioned revolver in her hand. Her mouth was stern.

Stopping abruptly as she caught sight of Ross standing in the middle of the floor unshut, she exclaimed: "There you are! Are you all right?"

"As a trivet," he replied.

She let out a long, loud laugh. "What was the shooting?"

"A little burst on my part."

"Anybody hurt?"

"No."

She was much relieved. "I was afraid they'd got you. I came as quick as I could. I was abed. That fool doctor threw a chill into me, and I've been going to rest early according to order. I didn't hear your gun, but Lee did, and ran to me. Don't let 'em hold you in here. If I was any good I'd stay and help. What you going to do—hold your men here all night?"

"I don't see any other way," Halley turned the place over to me, but—"He looked about him suspiciously.

"Bring 'em into my place. Lee has had new locks put on our doors; they'll help some."

"I don't like to do that, Mrs. Wetherford," he replied, with greater respect.

Mrs. Wetherford was about to leave when she heard a sharp rap on the door. She stopped her steps and peeped through the keyhole. "It's Gregg!" she cried, and, with a bound, Ross seized his revolver and bolted the door.

"WHERE YOU ARE! ARE YOU ALL RIGHT?" then he had ever shown her before. "They're all outside now, I suppose."

"All the better, I'll be on hand to help. But they're less likely to bolt in on you when you're locked down."

"But your daughter? It will alarm her."

"She'll be in the other house, and, besides, she'd feel easier if you are in my place. She's all wrought up by the attack on you."

Ross turned to his prisoners. "Follow Mrs. Wetherford and—see front!" "You needn't worry about me," said Joe. "I won't run."

"I don't intend to give you a chance," replied Ross.

Edwards seemed to have lost in both courage and physical stature. He slouched along with shuffling step, his head bent and his face pale. Ross was now perfectly aware for him, no utterly broken and helpless, but still look.

As Ross brought his two prisoners to the Wetherford House, Lee was waiting on the porch of the hotel, tense with excitement, straining her ears and eyes to see what was taking place.

The night had started with a small sliver of moon, but this had dropped below the eaves, leaving the street dark save where the lights from the windows of the all-night eating houses and saloons lay out upon the walls, and while she stood peering out the sound of raucous howling and shrill

Lee regarded him with the expression of one surprised. "You innocent little cub!" she exclaimed. "What you need is a booting!"

The ranger addressed himself to Lee. "I want to thank you for a very opportune intervention. I didn't know you could handle a gun so neatly."

She flushed with pleasure. "Oh, yes, I can shoot. My father taught me when I was only six years old."

As she spoke Ross caught the man Edwards studying them with furtive glance, but upon being observed, he assumed a cringing attitude, which concealed his contempt for the rangers, whom he considered beneath the rank of convicts and his form, so despising in his lines appealed to Lee with even greater poorness than his face. "I'm sorry," she said to him, "but it was my duty to help Mr. Cavanagh."

He glanced up with a quick sidewise glance. "That's all right, Miss. I should have sense enough to keep out of this business." He spoke with difficulty, and his voice was hoarse with emotion.

Lee turned to Lee. "The doc said no liquor, but I knew he'd be here to draw one. I feel faint."

Lee hurried to her side, while young Cavanagh followed his handsomely.

"Here something!" Lee said.

Lee put it away. "Not from you, just reach under my desk. Ross; you'll find some brandy there. That's it," she called as he produced a bottle. Clutching it eagerly she added, "They say it's poison, but it's my meat tonight." Little remained of the woman in Lee, and the old sheep herder eyed her with furtive curiosity.

"I was afraid you'd shoot," Lee explained to Ross, "and I didn't want you to turn up your hands on the dirty lancers. I had the right to kill. They were trespassers, and I'd done it too."

"I don't think they intended to actually assault me," he said, "but it's a bit discouraging to find the town so indifferent over both the breaking of the laws and the doings of a drunken mob. I'm afraid the most of them are people in a bad way from law abiding people."

Joe, who did not like the position in which he stood as regarding Lee, had made an offer of aid. "I don't suppose my word is any good now, but if you'll let me do it I'll go out and round up Judge Higley. I think I know where he is."

To this Lee objected. "You can't do that, Ross; you better hold the fort here till morning."

"Killing mountain sheep. I caught them with the head of a big ram upon their pack."

"Make him show his commission," shouted Gregg. "He's never been commissioned. He's no game warden."

Higley hemmed. "I—uh—oh, his authority is all right, Sam; I've seen it. If he can prove that these men killed the sheep we'll have to act."

Cavanagh briefly related how he had captured the men on the trail. "The head of the ram is at the livery barn with my horse."

"How about that?" asked Higley, turning to Joe. "I guess that's right," replied the innocent youth. "We killed the sheep all right."

Higley was in a corner. He didn't like to offend Gregg, and yet the case was plain. He met the issue bluntly. "Marshal, take these men into custody." Then to Ross: "We'll relieve you of your care, Mr. Cavanagh. You may appear tomorrow at 9."

It was a farcical ending to a very arduous thirty-six hour campaign, and Higley feeling like a man who, having ruled a huge stele to the top of a hill, has been ordered to drop it, said, "I insist on the maximum penalty of the law, Justice Gregg, especially for this man." He indicated to Gregg.

"No more smiting, Higley," added Lee, uttering her distrust in blunt phrase. "You put these men through or I'll make you trouble."

Higley turned and with unsteady solemnity saluted. "Fear not my government, madam," said he and so made out.

After the door had closed behind them Cavanagh blithely complained, "I've delivered my prisoners over into the hands of their friends. I feel like a thief in the night."

The honest appears and has her share of the meat. Very often they cannot devour their victim in one night; they come back to the place where the remains are on the following or the second night.

The lion's favorite food is zebra, which is not difficult, as they become excited merely by smelling a beast of prey—the cattle are tormented to the utmost by fear and horror, break through the kraal on the side opposite to the lions and thus fall an easy prey to the lions.

The lion chases his victim and then tears it upon his neck or breast and biting his teeth into this part. The hunted animal falls, and the lion now tears open the flanks.

Lee, under the spur of her dream, failed on with bitter lashing, baying the town and its people. Gregg listened to her with expressions which, like his eyes drowsily fixed on Lee's face, but his companion, the old herder, seemed to palpitate with shame and fear. And Ross had the feeling at the moment that in this ragged, unkempt old hobo was the skeleton of one of the old time heroes. He was wasted with drink and worn by wind and rain, but he was very far from being commonplace.

CHAPTER XII.
THE LAW STIRS IN.

HEERE they come again!" called Lee as the burry of foot along the walk threatened another attack. Ross Cavanagh again drew his revolver and stood at guard, and Lee, recovering her own weapon, took a place by his side.

Joe, who had been boasting of the smiles he had drawn from Lee, did not relish this tongue lashing from her mother; but, assuming a carefree air, he said, "I'm all out of smoke; get me a box, that's a good old soul."

With the strength of a bear the new assailant shook the bolted door. "Let me in!" he roared.

"It's dull!" called young Gregg. "Go away, you chump!"

"Let me in or I'll smash this door!" retorted Gregg.

"You smash that door, old Ruffrog!" announced Lee, "and I'll carry 'em off your lungs away. If you want to get in here you hunt up the Judge of this town and the constable."

The old ranger muttered a fierce curse, then added, "I'll hunt up the situation."

"I'm as eager to get out of this as you are."

"Any one can be, but they must be taken by proper authority. Bring a writ from the magistrate and you may have them and welcome!"

Gregg went away without further word, and Lee said: "He'll find Higley if he's in town, and I'm in town, for I saw him this afternoon. He's hiding out to save himself trouble."

Lee Virginia, with an understanding of the legalities of the case, asked, "Can't I get some something to eat?"

"Would indeed," he answered, and his tone pleased her.

She hurried away to get it, while Cavanagh disposed his prisoners behind a couple of tables in the corner.

"I guess you're in for a night of it," he remarked grimly, "so make yourselves as comfortable as you can. Perhaps your experience may be a disengagement to others of your kind."

Lee returned soon with a pot of strong coffee and some sandwiches.

"The usual way."

Unfortunately for the child, the doctor was erroneous, and he returned to find her behind the convent walls.

To me it is a pretty pretty problem for the actress that neither of the other two held."

"The story of the play," said Mr. Crawford, a short time before his death, "deals with a subject which was the subject of the year."

In this respect it was much like "The Cardinal," played by E. S. Willard, and which was written by Louis N. Parker. Both these plays had their origin in a bit of real life; both were told by a village priest, and both became plays. I imagine Italy is full of such things as these and yet they crop out to the audience very seldom. In the case of "The White Sister" which Miss Allen is to play, the situation is, I think, one which should appeal strongly to women—all women—for it deals with a girl who, when engaged to be married, feels her honor when her fiancé is ordered to the front in the pursuance of his duty as an officer of the Italian army, let her go without a protest. When she discovers from the lips of the kill that he is among them, then she becomes a convert. Unfortunately for her, however, she dies. But he seemed to get worse and called another doctor. This doctor was a man of the same name. They both prescribed medicine that did not agree with her. A friend advised her to take to the hospital, which she did. Two doctors there gave her medical advice.

"Nearly every day I would read a testimental notice in the paper, and I thought she would try it if it would help the baby. I got a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap and after the first application of the soap, the baby would soon get over. But he seemed to get worse and called another doctor. This doctor prescribed medicine that did not agree with her. A friend advised her to take to the hospital, which she did. Two doctors there gave her medical advice.

Games Tonight.

Johnstown at South Side.

Untown at Homestead. With three regulars out of the game Johnstown stood no chance at all against the Cokers and the game was, only a wild exhibition of basketball, only Kid Dark, Haggerty and Newman did not accompany the Jaws to Connellsville, Joe and Bill being on the sick list and Newman harrased from the contest because of his fight with O'Donnell the night before.

With a patched up team facing him, Captain Dark decided to give his line up of Wednesday night another trial and it worked splendidly. Kid Dark and Harry Beggs played the forwards, John Ahern occupied the center with Bigger Doherty and Leon Egolf in the guards. The forwards did practically all the scoring. The champion hero of the evening was Ahern, who just couldn't land a basket. John played the backfield most of the evening but the few chances he did have to shoot were wrong. On the other hand his opponent, Noll, played practically the entire game for the Jaws and countered eight goals.

Then sensation of the evening was Kid Dark's foul shooting. This was classy, express if mildly. The Cokers captain was particularly good form in the first half when he earned his first seven tries, missed one, caged them twice, raised one and turned it into a field goal, and then shot one, a total of 11 out of 13. On the other hand Johnstown failed to annex a single point from the free line in this half, Haggerty missing 8; Noll and McLaughlin 2 each and Campbell one. The second half saw Dark make 5 out of 8 tries and Haggerty 3 out of 4.

The first half was a procession on the part of the Cokers. They made 11 points before Johnstown scored its first 2. They then put the score up to 10, 23 to 5 and finally, as the bell rang, the close of the half, 25 to 10. The second session was a different story in which Johnstown did more scoring. The Jaws in the second session made 9 field goals to 6 for the Cokers and, but for the failure to shoot fouls might have made things warm for Captain Dark's men. The Cokers progressed nicely, to 27. At that point Johnstown had 16. Before the Cokers could make 18, 24 points, the Jaws had run the tally up to 27. During this exciting spell of the visitors, the Cokers played almost entirely on the defensive and attempted no heavy scoring during the session. The game was peculiar for its absence of long field goals. Johnstown made several attempts to score from midfield but to no avail. Practically every basket was a baulk shot or from the corners. The lineup:

Cokers—12	Johnstown—31
Dark ..... Forward	Campbell
Beggs ..... Forward	Haggerty
Ahern ..... Center	Noll
Egolf ..... Guard	Hall
Doherty ..... Guard	McLaughlin
Paid goals—Beggs 4	Dark 4
Doherty 2	Haggerty 1, Hall 1
Foul goals—Dark 16 out of 21; Haggerty 2 out of 15; Noll missed 2; McLaughlin missed 2; Campbell missed 1.
Others—Haggerty
Timers—Murphy and Poobahauk
Attendance—811.

Notes on the Game.
By defeating Johnstown last night and McKeesport's victory over Homestead now places the Cokers on even terms with the Young Americans for fourth place. It has been a stormy chase, and a long one, but Coker fans hope things will break better from now on and that the team will continue its consistent winning streak. Even under the difficulties of the week just closing the Cokers got off with an even break.

Harry A. Poobahauk, basketball editor of the Johnstown Democrat, was a spectator. He was pleased the score was not more one-sided.

Billy Kummer and Stavo White, the two crippled, watched the game from the sidelines. Billy has frighteningly discolored eyes but hopes to get into the game Monday.

Campbell of Johnstown looks like "Bunny" Elliott. Plays a good bit like him, too. Johnstown fans say with interest. Andie Campbell will be a second Smith. He is distractingly raw just now and seems lost in the cage.

"That man Noll is showing about as much class as any man Johnstown has to date. He played hard last night but had an even break on the week. Not training.

Referee Jim Zang was strict in his rulings and the game was slowed down considerably because of the fouls called, especially in the first half.

Egolf put up a nice game guarding Haggerty. He could only get a single field goal on Leon. Leo cornered one in the first half.

Haggerty and Beggs both guards, played forward positions. Beggs was a forward until last year when Greenburg played him at guard all season. "Bush" was some class forward, too.

Fat Men to Play Their Lean Friends

Manager H. E. March of the Cokers has arranged an attraction extraordinary as the present contest to meet day night's grand headliner. He has signed up a team of Fat and Leans to play basketball. Not only has March induced them to play but he has both sides enthusiastic over the proposition.

The Fats have some star athletes under contract to appear. Among them are Dr. T. B. Eckard, J. B. Marquette, Dr. R. S. McKee, Vincent Barry, Dr. H. C. Hoffman, Clarence W. Brooks, T. Benjamin Dennelly and A. Straub. The Fats aligned one across when they signed Straub but the teams insist Gus will have to wear a pillow under his jersey or he won't be eligible.

The Leans have some class to them also. F. R. Graham is the original skin also bones Fred Hurneman, Harry Mitchell, Kirk Renner, Bill Davidson, Eddie Dugan and Harry Kenney.

The Leans are already offering odds but they will have to show some class to bring home the bacon. There are some smooth articles in that lot of heavyweights.
